

Jhon Velasco, motivational speaker and campus administrator from Montclair State University in Montclair, NJ will lead us in a day long discussion and experience about Diversity, and multi-cultural issues. Jhon comes to us with a fascinating background that we will all appreciate. Mr. Velasco received his Bachelor of Arts from Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey and his Masters of Arts in Health Education at Columbia University. He has worked in Student Affairs at Julliard, health education at New School University, Planned Parenthood and HIV Prevention education in New Jersey.

Currently he is at Montclair State directing the Center for Non-Violence and Prevention Programs AND as Project Director, Department of Justice Grant to Reduce Violence Against Women on College Campuses. He holds adjunct positions at Montclair where he teaches courses in health, human sexuality, and health education.

Since 1995 he has been an Independent Consultant on Diversity and Communication Issues and his work includes lecturing and conducting workshops in universities and professional settings on diversity including heterosexism, racism, sexism and multicultural issues, communication and team building skills.