The Kalenian Award

The annual Kalenian Award is a commercialization prize with an 18-month duration. The prize may be awarded to one or more recipients involved in the invention of a product in order to assist in the process of moving the invention closer to market. The award may be given to support innovative ideas or the development of commercial products. Ideally, recipients should be innovating in either an existing small business or in the process of trying to establish a small business.

Proposals are encouraged for project types that: demonstrate the need to provide proof of concept, reduction to practice, or involves products that are in the early stages of commercial development. Proposals may be resubmitted if they did not receive a past Kalenian Award.

For the three-page written proposal, a very concise " who am I--- this is my idea---this is how it will benefit society---this is what I need to achieve my goals " would be much appreciated. This is not a business plan contest. We receive many very high-quality ideas, and it is a difficult exercise to select one winner.
